What we need

We urgently need your support to raise a total of £420,000

The current premises restrict the services that Cancer Support Scotland can deliver. The new Calman Cancer Support Centre will allow us to respond to an ever increasing demand for the services we provide to anyone affected by cancer.

Clinical work, in whatever speciality or professional group, nurses, doctors, dieticians, physiotherapists etc, is much more than prescribing the correct treatment. It is about caring for people as individuals and listening, communicating and learning to deal with their anxieties and concerns. For that reason we need to expand the facilities available to patients with cancer and their carers.

When Tak Tent, as it then was, began almost 30 years ago, its purpose was to not only provide care to people, but to help the caring professions to do even better and to make a difference to peoples lives. It was to use the experience of patients and their families to help others. The objective of Cancer Support Scotland is the same, to improve the overall care and quality of life of patients with cancer.

Professor Sir Ken Calman

Being diagnosed with cancer is devastating and a frightening experience, speaking to a Cancer Support Scotland trained Counsellor has allowed me to share my fears and come to terms with this disease.

Shaun, Cancer Patient

Initially I just wanted to talk to someone who would listen. That progressed onto receiving complementary therapies. After a massage I feel revitalized and ready to take on anything. I feel better at night and that is down to the girls at Cancer Support Scotland.

Janice, Cancer Patient

We need to deliver more services to help people affected by cancer

Our new centre will allow us to provide:

- additional counselling rooms - doubling our current capacity;
- a fully equipped wig and hairdressing salon - a new service we will be able to deliver;
- an additional modern relaxing complementary therapy suite - allowing us to increase our current provision;
- a new, improved information centre and internet access and expanded library facility;
- additional modern office space to allow increased use of volunteers;
- a new and peaceful courtyard garden.

Local community groups will also be able to hire the space for education, training, workshops and various meeting purposes.

With your support, we will continue to use our expertise to transform lives, making a traumatic experience more bearable.

My breast care nurse referred me to Cancer Support Scotland when I admitted to her that I was not coping. I will always be grateful to the folks at Cancer Support Scotland for all their support in helping me find the strength to find a way through my cancer journey.

Eileen, Cancer Patient
